Computer Science Experts in Novi Sad

Conference. At the Faculty of Sciences in Novi Sad, for the first time in Serbia, the “ADBIS” conference is organized – an event that traditionally gathers the most eminent European and overseas experts in the fields of databases and information systems. The conference starts today and will be held for the next four days.

Announcer:
For the first time in Novi Sad the ADBIS conference is organized, attended by computer science experts from all over the world. For the next four days they will exchange knowledge and experiences in emerging technologies.

Reporter, Biljana Kušljević:
The ADBIS conference was visited by close to 80 experts in the fields of databases and information systems. Conference attendees were greeted by the deputy mayor, Saša Igić.

Saša Igić, deputy mayor of Novi Sad:
This is actually a conference about those new technologies, computer science technologies and this is something that fits into the strategic framework of Novi Sad, and Novi Sad will support all conferences and all events of this kind in the future.

Reporter, Biljana Kušljević:
The conference was organized by the Faculty of Sciences. Experts for the faculty believe that international colleagues will bring valuable news from the world of emerging technologies.

Mirjana Ivanović, Faculty of Sciences:
Above all, I expect that the conference will have a significant impact on the research community of our university, our city, and our country, and that our researchers will have the opportunity to exchange experiences, and have discussions with colleagues from all over the world about the most important fields and topics in computer science.

Reporter, Biljana Kušljević:
The Provincial Secretariat for Science and Technological Development of the Autonomous Province of Vojvodina, as well as the Ministry of Science, have supported this gathering of computer scientists that ends on September 24.
September 20, 2010
RTV Vojvodina 1, 22:00, program “Postcards”

Announcer 1:
For the first time in our country the Faculty of Sciences is organizing the ADBIS 2010 conference. Maja will tell you what ADBIS is.

Announcer 2:
What exactly ADBIS is we will see in the following report, but I can tell you that this event gathers numerous worldwide experts from in science and research. Here is the answer to what is ADBIS.

Reporter, Vanja Jakšić:
The Faculty of Sciences in Novi Sad will host, until September 24, researchers from more than 90 countries within the international conference ADBIS 2010. Experts from all over the world will present research results and exchange experiences with colleagues from Serbia.

Mirjana Ivanović, Faculty of Sciences:
The conference is in the fields of information systems and databases, and is concerned with the latest developments in those fields, that have theoretical qualities as well as significance to widespread application.

Neda Mimica-Dukić, Dean of the Faculty of Sciences:
This conference is especially interesting and significant since it is dedicated to information systems. The topics of information society and information systems are important for the 21st century, with the Faculty of Sciences having a major role in the emerging developments.

Reporter:
Organizing such events at the University of Novi Sad is also a chance to show what we know and are able to achieve, making us recognizable, as was emphasized by the Rector, Prof. Dr. Miroslav Vesković.

Miroslav Vesković, Rector of the University of Novi Sad:
We need to preserve our experts, and in this regard we need to travel and present ourselves in other places, but also to bring the most eminent experts to our country, show our resources, our capabilities in science, research, and also in the educational processes in all fields of science.

Reporter:
By the way, this conference is organized in Serbia for the first time.